Starship Farragut Releases Second Film "For Want of a Nail" Released on the Internet

WASHINGTON, DC, December 6, 2007 — Starship Farragut, an independent film project based on the original series of Star Trek, today announced the official Internet release of its second film entitled, "For Want of a Nail". The film may be downloaded free by accessing the project's website at www.starshipfarragut.com.

"This has truly been a labor of love," said writer and director Mark Hildebrand. "We have created a story that stands on its own and will be enjoyed by everyone. There is an historic element to the adventure, and we worked very hard to be accurate and respectful of the subject matter. Gene Roddenberry expected his audience to think and we are doing the same."

"'For Want of a Nail' was Farragut Film's most ambitious project to date, and we were pleased to be a partner in its creation," said Michael Struck, Manager of NEO f/x. "This episode really tested NEO f/x's Total Media Package pipeline in the coordination of the CGI, musical score, Foley sound mix, and final media distribution. I am pleased to say that all of the pieces came together nicely, and everyone involved is proud of this release."

Starship Farragut's vignette, "Just Passing Through", is currently in post-production with NEO f/x. This short film provides a backdrop story for two of the four main principal characters of the series, and will be released early next year. In addition, Starship Farragut will begin filming its third episodic film entitled, "Fathers and Sons," in January 2008.

About Starship Farragut

Starship Farragut is based on the crew of the U.S.S. Farragut, a sister ship to the Enterprise, and takes place during the time of the original series of Star Trek. The Internet-based series is produced by Farragut Films, a non-profit organization. For more information, visit www.starshipfarragut.com. Star Trek is the copyright of CBS / Paramount Television.
