WASHINGTON, July 8 /U.S. Newswire/ -- Starship Farragut, a fan-film project based on the original Star Trek television series created by Gene Roddenberry, announced its official project kick-off today.

Produced by fans in the greater Washington, D.C. area, the project will be based on the adventures of the U.S.S. Farragut, a Constitution Class Starship (NCC-1702), and takes place during the time of legendary Captain James T. Kirk of the Starship Enterprise. Once the filming of each episode is complete, they will be accessible as free downloads via <http://www.starshipfarragut.com>.

"I have always been a fan of the original series," said Executive Producer, John Broughton. "After viewing the fan-based works of Starship Exeter and New Voyages, I wanted to make my own fan film based on another Constitution Class Starships. He added, "Being in a metropolitan area such as Washington, D.C. provides us with the opportunity to recruit many talented people to do what I consider online community theater. And we're not doing this for the fame or the fortune. We do it because we love the Star Trek and its message as crafted over 40 years ago."

The project is headquartered in the Greater Washington, D.C. Metropolitan Area, and has both cast and crew positions available. For those individuals interested in being part of this project, please contact StarshipFarragut@hotmail.com.
